

Lasting culture change happens only when an entire community is engaged.

We all need to support each other to ensure access and opportunities are available for all – including persons with disabilities. The much-needed migration from institutionalized care to community-based settings is happening now, so it's a great time to build partnerships.

That's why Build Inclusion partners with a variety of professionals in education, advocacy and health, including both corporations and non-profit businesses.

With a mission to build natural networks and community access for individuals with disabilities, our programs serve families and children in a cross-disability environment from elementary school to transition into adulthood.

Our flagship program, AIM! Advocacy + Inclusion on a Mission addresses the fact that education is fundamental to the paradigm shift that is necessary to opening opportunities for marginalized groups.

We want you to join the movement.

is a VERB ...
an ACTION word ... pointed in the RIGHT DIRECTION
and BOLD like so many parent, civic and self-advocates

Join the movement as we teach students about the power of advocacy and community inclusion for individuals with disabilities.

In its first two years, approximately 6,000 elementary students participated in AIM! events, along with more than 500 staff members. Nearly 300 families attended disability vendor fairs cohosted by AIM!/Build Inclusion and the local public school district. To pull this off, 50 volunteers served 1,000 hours.

Year over year, school invitations to AIM! increased by 85%, and we see that trend continuing for the upcoming school year.

By partnering with Build Inclusion, your organization can reach more people with less effort and cost than you would have to invest alone.

“Alone we can do so little. Together we can do so much.”

– Helen Keller

Lack of education and natural curiosity about behavioral, physical, emotional and learning differences often cause barriers to social connections. AIM! removes the stigma from disability by offering practical, fact-based definitions of various diagnoses. The program also provides the opportunity to learn about topics that affect inclusion from the standpoint of self-advocates and industry professionals.

AIM! is focused on breaking down barriers to communication, accessibility and perception about disabilities among today's youngest generation of future leaders. It creates a safe forum for presenting information about all disabilities in a way that debunks myths and stereotypes. Best of all, school staff members report that they are learning right alongside their students!

We know that understanding facilitates empathy, which improves the chances for forming friendships. And when you consider that approximately 15% of public school students receive accommodations or modifications through an IEPⁱ or 504 Plan, it's clear that this knowledge will benefit all members of our community for years to come.
